Mr. Footz.—I pass it over. But the Senator from New Hampshire has sa'd, that if I would visit that State, I would be treated to an argument. Why, I would not argue with him! What right have they of New Hampshire to argue upon the point. It is not a matter with which they stand to the least connected. They have no rights of property of this description, and I rejude to be able to say, that a large proportion of the intelligent and partiotic people of New Hampshire do not concent in the views expressed by the Senator the morning. They take the ground that the people of the linited States, the Constitution and the Union, have guaranteed the rights of the South, connected with the property, and that the people of New Hampshire have no right stail to meddle with the surject. Why, is thout a fact, that realteness, members of this body, among them the distinguished Senator from Massenhaetts, whom I regret not to serve in his place. from Massachusetts, whom I regret not to see in his place, are known to be more or less heatile to the teatilutions of domestic slavery, but have never unterteleed the doctrine, that the Congress of the United Scare, has any jurisdiction whatever, over the subject? They have held that any attempt directly to indirectly, to effect abolition or to encourage abolition by Congressional legislation is at war with the spirit and letter or the Constitution.

Mr. Hale — Will the Sonator allow me to inquire if he can point out a sincle instance, in which I have made any agreeates upon the right of property in the South Mr. FOOTE. — That is the very thing I am atout to show. When the Senator from New Hampshire undertakes to assert that those Northern men who do not concurrible in mer. "craves." he uses leavage of false and centrilous import. It is not the fact that his language will be rechood in any respectable neighborhood in New England. His sentiments will find no response or supprival in any enlighted victories in New England, and therefore he has no right to say that those who are faithful to the principles of the constitution and fail to recho the force, fanatical, and factious declarations of the Secator are "cravens" to heart, and deficient in any of the mobile centiments which characterize high spirited republicate.

Mr. Hale — I did not use such language.

Mr. Foote — Did the Senator not use the word "oraver."

If we are correctly informed, the Government has statemed a serious loss in the destruction of valuable maps and calculations connected with the North-Eastern Boundary Survey. These important muniments were, it appears, deposited in the house partly occupied by Major Graham of the Topographical Engineers, (now absent as bearer of the Treaty to Mexico.) which was destroyed by the fire that occurred in this city a few nights ago. These maps can, we suppose, be replaced, but only, we presume, by obtaining copies from their counterparts to possession of the Sritish towernment. It is fortunate that they can be replaced at all, as they were the fruits of rare scientific ability and great labor.

We trust that no time will be lost in replacing them, and is erecting fire-proof receptacles for these and other valuable plane and drafts—those exquisite Maps and Drafts, for example, of the Gost Sarvey.
